It Takes a Community

It takes the dedication and passion of many to care for the more than 100,000 children who visit SickKids each year. The strength and support of our community of staff, volunteers and donors enables SickKids to continually push the frontiers of care, research and learning and to make a profound difference in the lives of children who need our help.

Where Donor Dollars Go

Philanthropy has enormous impact at SickKids. Donations support major equipment purchases and capital renovations – ensuring our facilities remain leading edge. Donations fund training programs for our health professionals to keep them at the top of their fields. Donations fund the infrastructure for the SickKids Research Institute, allowing our scientists to push the frontiers of science. And donations fund national and global projects, helping to build capacity across the country and around the world to improve child health.

Imagine Canada accreditation

SickKids was among the first charities to receive distinction through Imagine Canada's new Standards Program for excellence in charitable operations.

May declared Healthy and Happy Month

Community invited to support children's health with an award-winning month-long campaign about pressing children's health issues.

$7 million from the Dilawri Group

Generous donation supports the Peter Gilgan Centre for Research and Learning and the Patient Amenities Fund.

Scrubs in the City shines

More than 800 gathered at this 11th annual gala event to raise funds for the Urgent Care Unit.

New Centres created

Four new centres created to advance care, research and knowledge in emerging fields: Genetic Medicine, Healthy Active Kids, Inflammatory Bowel Disease and Image-Guided Care.

Humanitarians at work

Eight outstanding caregivers receive Humanitarian Awards, having been nominated by people touched by their care.

Help for brain injuries

Researchers find a common diabetes drug might help treat brain injuries and neurodegenerative diseases and even enhance memory.

Donors celebrated

Close to 300 donors attended the annual Donor Hall to mark their shared vision and commitment to improving the future of child health.

Care, Research and Learning

SickKids is driven by a mission to provide the best in family-centred and compassionate care, to lead in scientific and clinical research and to prepare the next generation of leaders in child health.

CARE

SickKids provides a full spectrum of child health services for infants to youth up to age 18. Doctors, nurses and all of our health-care professionals are committed to family-centred care and service excellence, ensuring patients receive the best care possible and families are included every step of the way.

The level of care provided by SickKids is a true reflection of community-driven philanthropy, which enables the investment in the tools we need to make the hospital truly exceptional.

RESEARCH

Since its beginnings almost 60 years ago, the SickKids Research Institute has become Canada's largest child health research institute and a centre of innovation that places SickKids on the world stage of health-care expertise. Donations allow SickKids to support researchers, equipment and scientific studies that are transforming children's health and driving innovative research out of the lab and into practice faster than ever.

LEARNING

Learning has always been at the heart of everything we do at SickKids. The hospital provides opportunities for health-care practitioners to gain new knowledge so they can, in turn, provide the best care for sick children. An investment in learning at SickKids enables us to educate and empower the next generation of health-care workers and help them to be among the best in the world.

IN 2012-2013

Together We Will. This was the rallying theme of this year's SickKids advertising campaign. It underscores the remarkable impact we can have on children's health when we join together with determination – patients and families, with doctors, nurses, researchers and staff, volunteers and donors. And despite the challenging economy SickKids donors did give – a record $112 million through the Foundation's various fundraising programs. On behalf of the entire SickKids family, thank you so much for your generosity.

We are pleased to share several stories in our annual report about how your donations – like pebbles dropped in an ocean – are having an impact that is wide and long lasting. You will read about:

- Brygette's remarkable recovery from inflammatory bowel disease, thanks to the bright minds at SickKids who connected the dots between research and care
- Matthew, who is participating in a world-first research project aimed at curing cystic fibrosis, and
- Nik, who is thriving after two strokes, thanks to cutting-edge imaging technology at SickKids.

We understand the importance of collaborating with partners to accelerate scientific discovery and find new treatments. Please read about our exciting collaborations with the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health and the University of Toronto, as well as with Cystic Fibrosis Canada and the Heart and Stroke Foundation. We're also delighted to be working closely with the Caribbean community on an international initiative to improve outcomes for children with cancer and serious blood disorders.

This coming year marks a number of exciting firsts for SickKids. On September 17, we will officially open the Peter Gilgan Centre for Research and Learning, a new $400-million facility that will advance our reputation as one of the world's leading child health research centres. On September 28, we will launch the Canaccord Genuity Great Camp Adventure, an exciting family-focused event experience you won't want to miss. Stay connected to www.sickkidsfoundation.com for all the breaking news on SickKids and the work of the Foundation.

Please accept our profound appreciation for your generous support.

Brygette, 5 years

Brygette's remarkable cure shows how research makes a difference

By the age of two, Brygette had been hospitalized more than 40 times with fevers, severe symptoms of inflammatory bowel disease (IBD) and disabling arthritis. Doctors could not figure out the cause and were running out of treatment options. They suspected an immune system disorder, but that was ruled out.

Then they hit upon a discovery. After sequencing Brygette's DNA, Dr. Aleixo Muise, a researcher and gastroenterologist at SickKids, discovered a genetic mutation was the cause of her suffering. She was one of the first people in the world to be found with this mutation. Having identified the cause, Dr. Muise also determined Brygette had a shot at a cure. She became the first patient in Canada and one of the first in the world to be cured of her inflammatory bowel disease through a bone marrow transplant. Brygette is now five years old and is free of her IBD.

"Our lives have been completely transformed," says Brygette's mother, Penny. "For three years, I basically lived in the hospital with Brygette, not knowing if she would survive. She's now an active, happy and care-free kindergarten student."

"Brygette's success story is one of the most exciting experiences you can have in clinical medicine," says Dr. Muise. "We identified the specific genetic cause of her disease, which led to treatment that cured the disease."

Genetics research is dramatically changing the landscape of child health care today, research that would not be possible without the support of donors.

THE RATES OF INFLAMMATORY BOWEL DISEASE IN CHILDREN ARE RISING

Dr. Aleixo Muise

A chair in IBD

Expertise at SickKids in inflammatory bowel disease runs deep. Dr. Anne Griffiths is the inaugural holder of the Northbridge Financial Corporation Chair in Inflammatory Bowel Disease, a role made possible by a $2-million donation from the company. Incidence of IBD in children has been rising over the last 20 years, but the cause of the increasing frequency remains poorly understood. Dr. Griffiths has been part of international efforts which have identified genes contributing to IBD. She is also the lead researcher on a nationwide network studying children with newly diagnosed Crohn's disease and ulcerative colitis. The network is well positioned to help uncover how environmental factors and bacteria in the bowel might lead to IBD in genetically susceptible children.

Dr. Anne Griffiths

IMPACTING CARE INTERNATIONALLY

Inspired by Brygette's case, Dr. Aleixo Muise recently created the National Early Onset Paediatric IBD Cohort Study, an international research group that is collecting genetic data from childhood sufferers of IBD around the world to identify new genetic links and, hopefully, find new treatments.

This study is just one more way SickKids is making a significant impact on clinical care. There are currently more than 2,000 children and youth living with IBD in Ontario alone. Approximately 250,000 adults have IBD across Canada.

Nik, 18 years

Nik fought back after two strokes; SickKids is unlocking the black box of the disease

Not many people can solve a Rubik's Cube. But despite suffering two strokes when he was eight years old, Nik can proudly do it in 30 seconds, with one hand.

Nik's outlook for survival after the strokes was grim. "Our family was so unprepared for the news that our perfectly healthy son had a stroke," says his mother, Maxine. "Fortunately, SickKids was there."

Nik became a patient of SickKids neurologist Dr. Gabrielle deVeber. Part of his care involved having his brain imaged so doctors could determine the best long-term treatment for him. He also took part in a study that used imaging techniques to determine how the brain reorganizes hand function after a stroke.

Although Nik lost half his vision as well as the use of the right side of his body, at 18, he won't let the impact of his strokes affect his life. He has learned to swim again and is now an international-level para-swimmer.

"Nik has never been afraid to face adversity head on. He's a fighter and hasn't looked back," says his mother.

SickKids is now expanding its expertise in stroke to a global level through the creation of the Heart and Stroke Foundation and Nolen Hicks Stroke Imaging Laboratory for Children.

The work of the laboratory will not only enhance our understanding of paediatric stroke, but stroke in adults as well.

"Locked inside the brain of each child with stroke are solutions to mysteries surrounding this devastating form of cardiovascular disease," says Dr. deVeber.

Marlowe, 4, stroke survivor

Driven by donors

The passion and support of our donors make great things happen at SickKids. The Lenz/Hicks families are a perfect example. After her son suffered a stroke, Laura Hicks was driven to help other families like hers. Along with her parents, Marjorie and Don Lenz, and her husband Bradley Hicks, the families are the lead donors for the Heart and Stroke Foundation and Nolen Hicks Stroke Imaging Laboratory for Children (SILC) and have committed to spearheading the fundraising effort for the $2.3 million project. They are also the catalyst for engaging the Heart and Stroke Foundation and the Canadian Pediatric Stroke Support Association as supporters to help SILC become a reality.

STROKE AFFECTS ONE IN 2,800 CHILDREN BORN IN CANADA

PEER-REVIEWED RESEARCH GRANTS

The Heart and Stroke Foundation is also partnering with SickKids by committing $20 million over a 10-year period in peer-reviewed grants for heart and stroke research at the hospital. SickKids is the most productive heart and stroke research group in the world. We established Canada's first paediatric stroke clinic in 1995 and we perform more than 85 per cent of paediatric cardiovascular surgery in Ontario. This research funding will keep SickKids at the forefront of children's cardiovascular health.

Matthew, 8 months

Matthew is part of a world-first project on cystic fibrosis

Even before Matthew was born, his parents knew he already had some of the signs of cystic fibrosis (CF), a condition that affects the lungs and the digestive system. He was rushed to SickKids for surgery right after birth.

“It’s the worst feeling watching your child fight to get better,” says Matthew’s mother, Gillian. “You can’t do anything to help other than be there and love them unconditionally.”

That’s why they’re hopeful an exciting new research project at SickKids might help Matthew and other children like him. Last year, SickKids researcher, Dr. Janet Rossant, and her team became the first in the world to use skin cells from patients with CF to produce mature lung cells in a petri dish.

Lung cells generated from patients can be used to develop and test drugs that target the genetic mutation underlying the condition. If the drugs work on the lung cells, then later they may also be tried on the patient. Until recently, the only therapies available for patients with CF targeted the symptoms, like infection and digestive disorders, rather than the underlying genetic alteration.

This research illustrates that every donor dollar counts when it comes to providing the best care for patients. Donors support the research staff, the equipment and the facilities necessary for these discoveries.

“There were really two reasons behind participating in the research study: a little hope and a lot of fear,” says Gillian. “My optimistic side would say a lot of hope. Despite his condition, Matthew’s been a happy boy providing us smiles.”

Dr. Janet Rossant

SickKids is leading the way

- SickKids researchers discovered the cystic fibrosis gene in 1989.
- In 2011, researchers identified specific genes that predict the severity of the disease in individual patients.
- Research on therapies that are targeted to individual patients is now well underway. Thanks to research which is improving care, the average life span of people with cystic fibrosis in Canada is now 48. Fifty years ago, the average life expectancy was only four years.

PARTNERSHIP FOR A CURE

Cystic Fibrosis Canada’s support of CF research across Canada – more than $140 million since Cystic Fibrosis Canada’s inception – has drawn a roadmap of discovery over the past three decades, with many of these roads connecting to SickKids. This brings hope to the close to 300 patients with cystic fibrosis that SickKids currently follows. In part through the efforts of SickKids and Cystic Fibrosis Canada, we now have the genetic knowledge, therapeutic expertise and clinical trial capability to translate CF discoveries into patient recoveries at an accelerated rate.

Cesar, 12

Children like Cesar will benefit from a new mental health collaborative that improves access to care

Cesar is a more confident and stronger young man today than he was two years ago. Born premature and with severe hearing loss, he struggled at school and with behavioural issues. Since coming to SickKids early last year, he has become a new person, says his mother, Ambar.

He is doing well at school and even speaks three languages now – English, Spanish and American Sign Language – and is learning French Sign Language.

Cesar’s struggle to find the right mental health support and services for his situation is no surprise to Dr. Peter Szatmari. In March 2013, he began a newly-created position responsible for developing an integrated child and youth mental health program across The Hospital for Sick Children, the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health and the University of Toronto. He is also the holder of the Patsy and Jamie Anderson Chair in Child and Youth Mental Health.

“The biggest challenge in child and youth mental health today is access to evidence-based services,” says Dr. Szatmari. His goal is to champion innovation and collaboration across organizations to improve this access.

Between 10 and 20 per cent of children experience mental health difficulties, a number that doubles to 40 per cent among children who also have chronic physical illnesses. But he’s optimistic.

“Our knowledge of mental health and illness in children and youth has exploded over the last decade. The pace of discovery is breathtaking. So the chance of a healthy future for our children is very good.”

The role of philanthropy

Visionary donors are making it possible for SickKids and its partners to leap forward in research and the treatment of mental health. Patsy and Jamie Anderson have donated $1.5 million to establish the Chair in Child and Youth Mental Health now held by Dr. Peter Szatmari, a donation matched by SickKids Foundation. Gail and David O’Brien are also contributing $1.5 million to establish the O’Brien Scholars Program in Child and Youth Mental Health through the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health and SickKids. The Program will support the hiring of up to 20 research and clinical scholars at both hospitals and create a future generation of leaders in the field.

Jamie and Patsy Anderson

MENTAL HEALTH LEADER

Dr. Peter Szatmari is the newly appointed Chief, Child and Youth Mental Health Collaborative at The Hospital for Sick Children and the Centre for Mental Health and Addiction as well as the Director of the Division of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry at the University of Toronto. He is an award-winning clinician, researcher and author in autism spectrum disorders, including Asperger syndrome. He is also a founding member of a national network of parents, clinicians, policy-makers and scientists dedicated to research in early intervention in autism.

Dr. Sharon McLean-Salmon

Caribbean children have only a 50 per cent chance today of surviving cancer; SickKids is changing that

In Canada, more than 80 per cent of children diagnosed with cancer will survive. For some countries in the Caribbean, survival is “a flip of the coin,” says Dr. Upton Allen, Division Head of Infectious Diseases at SickKids and co-leader of the Caribbean-SickKids Paediatric Cancer and Blood Disorders Project which was launched this year.

Working with six countries across the English-speaking Caribbean – The Bahamas, Barbados, Jamaica, St. Lucia, St. Vincent and the Grenadines and Trinidad and Tobago – the new five-year project aims to improve outcomes for children affected by these devastating diseases. The plan includes training health professionals in oncology, nursing and pharmacy, enhancing diagnostic services in the countries and establishing a first-ever paediatric cancer registry to capture information on cases, treatment and outcomes.

For Dr. Sharon McLean-Salmon, currently completing a two-year fellowship at SickKids as part of the project, it’s all about doing the best for her patients that she possibly can.

“Oncology care in Jamaica is not where it needs to be and it is my hope that with the training I will be receiving from SickKids, I can contribute to improving care in my country.”

When she returns home, Dr. McLean-Salmon will be the second paediatric oncologist in Jamaica.

The $8-million project, which Dr. Allen describes as “potentially transformational,” is funded through an ongoing fundraising campaign. It is an exciting part of the hospital’s growing worldwide impact. SickKids is also working on global child health initiatives in Africa and Asia thanks to donor support.

Dr. Upton Allen

Building capacity

Worldwide, 250,000 children are diagnosed with cancer every year. Eighty per cent of them live in developing countries. Early diagnosis and treatment are key to a cure. In addition to providing training onsite at SickKids, the Caribbean-SickKids Paediatric Cancer and Blood Disorders Project includes a telemedicine component. Oncology health-care providers from across the Caribbean will be able to connect with experts from around the world – without ever leaving home – to assist them in diagnosing and treating their patients.

Jameca, leukemia survivor in Barbados, and her father

IT TAKES A VILLAGE

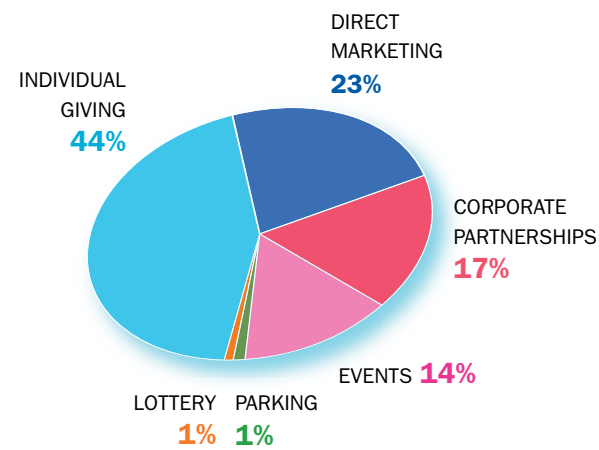

Caribbean roots run deep in Canada. Many individuals with Caribbean connections have been lining up to support the Caribbean-SickKids Paediatric Cancer and Blood Disorders Project. From the organizers of Toronto’s Annual Barbados Ball, to the Leslois Shaw Foundation and the Garron family, donors have shown their commitment to reducing the disparity that exists between Canada and the Caribbean. Corporations with Caribbean connections, such as Scotiabank and Sandals, are also lending their support. With more than $4.5 million raised to date, there is already a good start on bridging the gap and saving lives.

at SickKids

“When treatment options ran out for our seven-year-old son, James, we founded The James Fund at SickKids to raise money for research that could lead to a cure for neuroblastoma. After James’ death, the Fund continued to raise over $5 million, funding multiple research projects and providing a rallying call for other parents facing this deadly childhood cancer. We are very grateful to those who have joined us in our fight to defeat neuroblastoma. We believe there is nowhere better than SickKids to provide support for some of the world’s leading scientists.”

Syd and Pam Birrell, parents of James and founders of The James Fund for Neuroblastoma Research in honour of James Birrell

"SickKids Foundation makes giving personal. They help you to find an area that you feel good about supporting, and help to explain how your money is being used in the hospital. That's very important to donors. We are enjoying the process of giving and passing that value on to our children."

"Coast to Coast Foundation is honoured to have supported many of the world-class paediatric oncology programs provided by SickKids. From research, to priority in-hospital support, to financial assistance programs, we are proud to have partnered with SickKids to make a difference for children and their families impacted by cancer."

Jeff Rushton and Steven Sokolowski, Founders, Coast to Coast Against Cancer Foundation

Jeff Rushton and Steven Sokolowski

“Supporting SickKids comes easy for our family. We have seen the exemplary care offered to our children over the year, and we have met compassionate, quality staff who prioritize the overall health of all children. Supporting research and clinical care at SickKids means that the most vulnerable people in our society are in the best hands.”

"Our mom, Evelyn Jean Brown, a warm and loving mother of two daughters, was especially grateful for having been blessed with happy, healthy children. She made an impact at SickKids by establishing an endowment fund that will forever support patient care, health research and paediatric specialist education to assist families who are not so fortunate. As we commemorate our mother's cherished memory, we celebrate her legacy of having provided ongoing gifts to SickKids."

Major Gifts

A special thank you.

Much is asked of those who serve on the SickKids Foundation Board of Directors. With tireless energy, they embrace our mission to inspire our communities to invest in health and scientific advances to improve the lives of children and their families in Canada and around the world. They are outstanding examples of leadership in volunteerism and philanthropy and we are fortunate for their service. As we thank our donors in these pages, we also offer a heartfelt "thank you" to the Board members who have recently completed their terms or will be completing them this year.

Olivia, 22 months

At almost two years old, Olivia is already an expert at serving tea, at least in make believe. Watching her set out her plastic tea set, you'd never know this happy little girl has already had two open heart surgeries.

Olivia has hypoplastic left heart syndrome and will undergo her third open heart surgery at SickKids this year to help treat the condition. This means she can look forward to many more years of tea parties.

Visit www.sickkidsfoundation.com
to see videos of Olivia and other
SickKids kids in this annual report.
